

Protection against sexual harassment

according to the Regulations on the Protection Against Sexual Harassment at the University of Zurich

The University of Zurich has a set of regulations to ensure protection against sexual harassment. These regulations are based on the fundamental assumption that all staff and students should treat each other with respect. This does not mean that interpersonal relations should be purely impersonal, distant and formal. On the contrary, friendly and relaxed personal interaction among all genders is and should be a normal part of everyday life at the University. Nevertheless, the regulations stipulate unequivocally that sexual harassment is prohibited and will not be tolerated.

To whom do the regulations apply?

All staff and students at the University of Zurich.

What is sexual harassment?

Any behavior of a sexual nature that is unwanted by one party and that degrades or offends a person because of their gender or gender identity.

What is permitted and what not?

Friendly compliments and humorous conversations are not a problem as long as they are well received. The key is not how a behavior is intended, but how the person concerned perceives it. Behaviour that is inappropriate and not permitted includes unwelcome physical contact, intrusive behaviour, salacious remarks and jokes about appearance or physical characteristics. Showing potentially offensive images or behaving in other ways conveying or creating an oppressive work or study climate also contravenes the regulations. The same naturally applies to all unlawful sexual acts.

Where can I find the precise wording of the regulations?

The document is available on the University's website: <https://t.uzh.ch/1mZ>. The regulations also stipulate what measures are to be taken in the event of sexual harassment, and what rights the affected parties have.

What can affected parties do?

If the situation allows, the harassment can be rejected. Those affected can also get in touch with the contact persons of the RSB Committee at any time. The contact persons are happy to provide confidential advice and further support.

Furthermore, the University has designated Prof. Dr. iur. utr. Brigitte Tag, Professor, Faculty of Law, UZH, to handle any legal issues in cooperation with the University's Legal Services and Data Protection.
